Emos		steel	straight	BW, SEW
Emu	Emu Yarns see also Jouvenia	metal, resin	SP	SEW CC974	The resin needles have a built-in tip guard as a stopper - bit unwieldy if using a bulky yarn. Jouvenia also has this tip guard stopper, although a slightly different shape. There was also an Emu brand name in Australia in the early 1900's to about 1980. See my notes on hardcopy file. Aussie firm was named Kinneau and they sold carpet yarns and haberdashery. Kinneau appears not to be related to the UK firm. UK firm used a figural emu trademark, as did the Australian firm (but different from the British

Flora MacDonald	Abel Morrall brand -- There is an argument that the trademark was acquired by Morralls in an early merger. But MP says Abel Morrall registered the Flora MacDonald trademark in 1905 and there is no evidence of the brand being sold before that date. The brand continued in use until after WWII, probably not much beyond 1950.	metal	SP, DP	SEW CC568 Information provided by CB and MP among others	"Needles are nicely engraved with the company name on the flat disc head, plus a registered number 703016 on the thick part of the needle. According to the information I have found this would date these needles prior to WW1, or about 1911. They are 12" long and are very unusual in that the first 4" of the needles are size 8, but then the needles thin right down to about a size 14". CC568 includes the
